SPEIRS MAJOR

With a prominent location on Hyde Park corner overlooking Wellington Arch and the grounds of nearby Buckingham Palace, the civic role of this substantial new piece of architecture is reflected in the design of the external identity and arrival experience after dark.

Drawing on our understanding of the natural lighting conditions of London, we sought to create the right balance between the Portland Stone facades, the entrance courtyard, and the modest light levels of Belgravia. Inside, the lighting details contribute to the hotel's elegant blend of modern and heritage British style, tuning seamlessly with the natural daylighting conditions in each space.
